

EMPLOYEE SUPPORT
PROGRAM
JUL. 2017

Multigenerational workplaces allow employees the opportunity to learn skills specific to a variety of age groups. Younger employees may be more adept at using technology, while older workers have a better grasp on traditions and company history.

Mixing older and younger people provides opportunities for both to mentor each other and contribute to an organization's success.

Your Employee Support Program can assist you with a full selection of resources on how to thrive in a multigenerational workplace.

- Articles on bridging the generation gap and social networking for baby boomers
- Skill Builder training on business etiquette and professionalism
- Online seminar on communication skills for collaboration
- Information for managers to help employees succeed
